THE 2018 budget funds the beginning of a plan to revitalise Breda's CRD, particularly the northern end.

Let year's budget suggested election-year promises would come in relation to the Rondigo law costs, with a 2017-18 commitment of $3.9 million to "develop plans to address current and future demand pressures so cases can be heard sooner"

Also provided was $1 million for Bendigo to develop a proposal to “consolidate Victorian public service and council functions and agencies into a new customer service centre”. It was a planning budget – and this year, the next piece of the puzzle have been put in place.

The Riverside Bank will bookend the CHD project.

Deputy leader of the Nationals, Steph Ryan, believes the state government has left it until six months before an election to show an interest in TAFE.

"Daniel Andrews' TAFE rescue has been a miserable failure with student numbers crashing by more than 150,000," he says. "Now in an election year he's announced courses will be free in a desperate bid to save face and get students through the doors. A majority of Victoria's TAFEs are struggling financially, with many relying on government bailouts to stay afloat."

Making TAFE courses free has the potential to decimate adult education providers and goes against the advice of Labor's own VET funding review which found it would result in over-enrolments in some areas of provision.<sup>11</sup>
