

Australians Chinese personal shoppers about more than baby formula—it's a $1 billion industry

7:30 By Michael Vincent
Updated April 26, 2019 10:20:17

PHOTO: Demand for baby formula in China has regularly sent Australian supermarket shelves empty. (ABC News, Brian Hurd)

Ever seen people clear entire shelves of baby formula at your local pharmacy or supermarket?

Those shoppers may be Daigou — the Chinese practice of buying on behalf of someone else. It's a relatively simple business.

Daigou can make between $5-$10 profit on each tin of formula.

An order will be sent or negotiated via WeChat (the Chinese messaging service), which has inbuilt cash transactions.

Then it's just a matter of shopping, packing and sending the product (including receipts) to the Chinese buyer.

'Australian baby formula is the best'

PHOTO: Cici He is a Daigou for Chinese clients. (ABC News, Jerry Roberts)

Meet personal shopper Cici He.

The Sydney mother of two has been a Daigou for 10 years.

"In the beginning I was just a mother sharing my life with my friends and my family and they thought Australian products were very good, so they asked me can I buy it for them," Ms He said.

She's also now an "influencer" — regularly livestreaming to tens of thousands of mums about Australian products.

Her latest interest is Australian groceries and health products.

"Food like the oil. We sell a lot to China right now [but] some food depends on the government [regulations]."

Price is clearly not an issue.

"Australia's organic food is very famous in China," she said.

"At the beginning [of my business] we started with the baby formula.

"Everyone think Australian baby formula is the best, so it's very popular."

'Formula should be available at our local supermarket'

PHOTO: Dalissa Marciano is frustrated that some essential goods aren't yet available for her own mothers at bulk buyers. (ABC News)

Ten years ago a poisoning scare involving Chinese baby formula drove an increase in Chinese demand for safe Australian baby formula, much to the frustration of mothers like Dalissa Marciano.

She has regularly run into problems getting baby formula for her son — watching others buy in bulk.

A recent trip to her local pharmacy left her particularly furious.

"A guy was there was racking up six cans of Bellamy's, six cans of A2 and four cans of Karicare," she said.

"I feel incredibly frustrated just because we have to go through this process when we shouldn't have.

"Formula should just be available at our local chemist, at our local supermarket.

"We shouldn't have to be put through having to drive left, right and centre to try and find what we need."

Daigou exports 'like Australia Post on steroids'

PHOTO: Dr Mathew McDougall runs an online Daigou business. (ABC News, Jerry Roberts)

There have been several incidents filmed by angry Australian shoppers questioning the mass-purchasing of baby formula.

It's a situation Dr Mathew McDougall wants to remedy.

He's a Mandarin-speaking entrepreneur and president of the Australia-China Daigou Association — a group he hopes will regulate the practice of Daigou to stop the shell-clearing.

"If you turn to current affairs or on the TV shows, everything you saw was negative and it was seen to be an unfair characterisation in my mind," Dr McDougall told 7.30.

He also sells to Daigou via an online warehouse.

"We're talking about a $1 billion cross-border trade," he said.

"I'd be suggesting in the tens of thousands [of items] a week.

"Now that would blow the mind of most people.

"It's like Australia Post on steroids."

TOP STORIES

• Several court cases to be reviewed in wake of King Cross nightclub case

• AAP blood testing continues in wake of bank royal commission scandal

• SPORT: Trialists found guilty in biggest scandal in racing history

• Morrison to offer $10 tax cut for low-income earners in federal budget

• Former Liberal leader denounces 'mother' of all political budgets

• Critics say plastic capture system will trap marine life, add more garbage to ocean

• These policies are worth billions — but good luck finding them in the budget

• Waste collection recycling crisis deepens amid Cleanaway stand-off

• ANALYSIS: Analysis: Why you're suddenly getting privacy emails from eBay and Facebook, and what it means for your data

• 'Who killed you?' The double murder that shone justice on a crime scene

• Man faces $5,000 penalty for backyard pool resurfacing a 'black water' mould-infested swamp

• Melania Trump launches 'Be Real' campaign targeting cyberbullying

• Analysis: Deal or no deal? Trump under pressure on Iran

• John Cleese addresses his 'very good' with Kuala Lumpur's award named after him

• Callout for citizen scientists needed to record frog sounds via app

• SPORT: Should the National cup be one-week AFL ban for this level?

• Former PM Bob Hawke admitted to mislead

• SPORT: David Warner and Cameron Bancroft considering cricket come-back in T20

• SPORT: AIS to undergo painful 'full medical' restrictions in bid for more Olympic success

• Mystery over fate of sky-diving prince, 'missing' after trying to flee Dubai

• Costello says he'll be dead before debt paid off

• Blue eggs offered as a solution to identify pasture-raised produce

CONNECT WITH ABC NEWS

News Podcasts

GOT A NEWS TIP? >

If you have inside knowledge of a topic in the news, contact the ABC.

NEWS IN YOUR INBOX

Top headlines, analysis, breaking news & more.

ABC BACKSTORY >

ABC teams share the story behind the news and insights into the making of digital, TV and radio content.

EDITORIAL POLICIES >

Read about our editorial guiding principles and the enforceable standards our journalists follow.

Chinese demand booming

PHOTO: An AuMake daigou store in Australia (ABC News: Jerry Richard)

Enter the chain of shops designed with Daigou in mind — AuMake.

Shoppers can buy, pack and send from the store with child-minding and a cafe.

Australian small and medium businesses pay to stock their wares and there's a seminar room for new products which beams presentations live into China.

AuMake's listed on the ASX and recently opened its eighth store in Sydney with more plans to expand.

"We are going to nine in the next month or two," executive chairman Koeng Chan told 7.30.

"We'll be looking to expand across Australia into Queensland and Victoria and we'll do that in the next coming months."

He said most Australian businesses are still trying to get their head around the massive expansion in demand from China via Daigou shoppers.

"You're talking about the Chinese market, you're talking about the population of Australia in one city and how's it possible for an Australian supplier to be able to supply a hundred cities. If you want to think about it in that context, because that's what we are talking about, and that's why [we're] finding demand and supply out of whack," he said.

Meeting demand at home and abroad

PHOTO: Blackmores products are a favourite of Daigou (ABC News: Emily Stewart)

Businesses like Blackmores have recognised this new opportunity for sales.

"I think a lot of our products have been carried in the suitcases literally out of country for some time now," said Tim Scotcher, Blackmores' general manager medicinal foods.

Now they have to ensure they can meet demand at home and abroad — especially when it comes to baby formula.

"Blackmores is committed to ensuring that we can continue to supply all mums including, obviously, our mums in China, in our Daigou network," Mr Scotcher said.

"But, of course, critically for us is maintaining our suppliers for Australian mums and keep focus."

But it's too late for Mrs Marciano.

She has already given up on formula and decided to give her son full-cream milk earlier than they wanted.

"I just want Australian families to be given the opportunity to actually buy food for their children and not have to go through the stress of trying to find formula," she said.

Topics: food-and-beverage, retail, economic-trends, globalisation-economy, multiculturalism, babies, australia, china
First posted April 26, 2018 17:32:11

FEATURES

The young woman whose rape case put consent on trial. You've probably heard her story, what happened in the laneway behind a Kings Cross nightclub. Now she's speaking publicly for the first time as a warning to others.

Eight charts that illustrate our growing tax problem. There's never been a better time for tax reform. But as governments have tried (and stumbled) over the years the burden has shifted to individual taxpayers and the latest budget looks no different.

Tom Kruse helps teach kids about outbreak. A new National Motor Museum exhibit is teaching children about outbreak. It's Turnbull's choice: Debt and deficit, or default. Talk about fortuitous timing. There's an election looming and a budget situation — long portrayed as a disaster — suddenly on the mend. But what to do with this sudden bounty?

TOP STORIES

- Sexual consent laws to be reviewed in wake of Kings Cross nightclub case
- AMP blood-testing continues in wake of bank royal commission scandal
- Trainers found guilty in 'biggest scandal in sporting history'
- Motion to offer $10 tax cut for low-income earners in federal budget
- Former Liberal leader doctors 'treacher' of all political budgets
- Critics say plastic capsize system will trap marine life, add more garbage to ocean
- These policies are worth billions — but good luck finding them in the budget
- Waste collection recycling crisis deepens amid Cleanaway stand-off
- Alpacas: Why you're suddenly getting privacy results from eBay and 'Fatter', and what it means for your data
- Who killed you? The double murder that where police consulted a Daigou board

JUST IN

- Asbestos victims who can't care for sick wife James Hardie in landmark trial
- Chief Justice Oliver handed in Melbourne court rape attack
- Man cops $3,500 penalty for backyard pool resembling a 'black water' moose-infested swamp
- These policies are worth billions — but good luck finding them in the budget
- South Australia's budget slides back into deficit
- NY Chief Minister apologises to LGBT community for 'discrimination'
- Tour the tricky world of virtual reality at National Gallery
- Trainers found guilty in 'biggest scandal in sporting history'
- AMP blood-testing continues in wake of bank royal commission scandal
- Blue eggs offered as a solution to identify pasture-raised produce

MOST POPULAR

- "I am that girl: The young woman whose rape case put consent on trial"
- Conservative alerted to no cop who was 'tricked' by police for torturing a paedophile priest
- Mission that 'gets off the rails' ends with jury dismissed after seven months
- 'Orwellian nonsense' China establishes after US claims territory warning to international airlines
- 8 charts that illustrate our growing tax problem
- Mystery over fate of sky-diving prisoners 'hitting after trying to flee Dubai'
- Motion to offer $10 tax cut for low-income earners in federal budget
- Sexual consent laws to be reviewed in wake of Kings Cross nightclub case
- Hawaii volcano destroys 25 homes, leaves more than 50 missing in the air
- Former Liberal leader doctors 'treacher' of all political budgets

ANALYSIS & OPINION

- Iran: deal or no deal? Donald Trump facing serious pressure
- Why Trump-style company tax cuts won't work the same here
- 8 charts that illustrate our growing tax problem
- Don't let V&A controversy overshadow Victoria's grand final win
- Turnbull's choice: Debt and deficit, or default
- Ben Simmons is finally looking like a mule as his team prepares to sell the NBA playoffs
- Flaring trade tensions fail to rattle 'goldilocks' economy as US goes it alone
- Controversy dominates A-League GP with hopes postponed and another VAR failure
- Wile budget: Here's what it means for you
- Forget the checklist: what about the plastic changing is unexamined asked?

SITE MAP

Sections	Local Weather	Local News	Media	Subscribe	Contact
ABC News	Sydney Weather	Sydney News	Video	Podcasts	Updated
Just In	Melbourne Weather	Melbourne News	Audio	RSS Feeds	Contact Us
Australia	Adelaide Weather	Adelaide News	Photos
World	Brisbane Weather	Brisbane News
Business	Perth Weather	Perth News
Entertainment	Hobart Weather	Hobart News
Sport	Darwin Weather	Darwin News
Analysis & Opinion	Canberra Weather	Canberra News
Weather
Traps
Archive
Complaints & Clarifications

Change to mobile
New

This service may include material from Agence France Press (AFP), Associated Press (AP), CNN and the BBC World Service which is copyright owned by reproduction.

AEST = Australian Eastern Standard Time (UTC +10 hours ahead of GMT (Greenwich Mean Time))